Women & Investing

The disconnect between women and Wall Street runs deep. While women have proven to be better investors than men statistically, they tend to shun the stock market for the deceptive safety of cash savings.

As Carrie Bradshaw once said, “I like my money right where I can see it — hanging in my closet.” Sadly, however, it’s this very behavior that can potentially lead women to undue financial vulnerability.

THIS WORKSHOP WILL COVER THE FOLLOWING:

- How to invest for growth, income, & financial security
- How to overcome the million dollar gender gap
- Why women are statistically better investors than men
- Where Wall Street fails to attract female investors
- A woman’s greatest financial regret? Having not invested more
